Prior to the summer of 1953 the Rumanian Army was very badly equipped with mostly obsolete weapons of German origin. For the past several months the allotment of arms has been increased with great intensity. There are Soviet carbines, machine guns and light medium caliber artillery of Czech and Soviet origin, but little in the way of heavy artillery. The most interesting weapon is the 57 mm antitank gun which has a new sight apparatus that attains 100 per cent accuracy after the second shot.
